Longest Steel Bars Shipped by Local Works of U.S. Steel

Torrance Works of U. S. Steel's Columbia-Geneva Division has completed shipment of 300 tons of the largest and longest reinforcing bars produced on the West Coast, it was announced today.

Rolled in 100-foot lengths at the Torrance mill, the 2-inch-square "rebars" were shipped by rail to Seattle in two consignments.

Coupled together as a unit, seven railroad cars carried the long steel bars.

G. E. Johnson, general foreman—rolling mill finishing and shipping departments, used a 10-ton warehouse crane to load each shipment on three 65-foot gondola and four railroad flat cars. Crane lifts were made at two points of the long reinforcing bars, using a 50-foot spreader bar for stiffening and stability.
